tudentbody Presidential Hopefuls oice Ideas On Campaign Issues

residential candidates, Rod Barrie McKay, and Webb kett have stated some per- l views and issues that will of concern in studentbody tions.

residential candidate Fye , "Social units, I have dis- red as an Inter-Oreganiza- Council executive, contri- much more to campus life I had ever before supposed, they get far too little pub- y for it.

They receive a dispropor- ate amount of publicity for occasional act of a thought- immature member, and the tige of all units is lowered he minds of BYU students may not take time to be in their evaluations.

OC has shown me the pos- ities of social units," Fye regard to marriage, Fye es. "The present studentbody dent is married and one of candidates is engaged. It ld create a fine uproar of at J (of all schools) we said the entbody president could not married.

A single candidate my age gets more particular and desirable each year should be required to make a state- t about married studentbody presidents which next year could be held up to him as a campaign promise to either remain single or get married."

"I'm grateful for a companion who has an interest in student government and who will not only be a help in domestic affairs, thus allowing me more time to devote to my job, but will also be a great help and encouragement in my fulfilling my responsibility."

So stated McKay, studentbody president candidate, when asked how marriage would affect his time if elected.

Marriage Discussed

McKay, who plans to be married this June, was certain that he would have more time available, as a married man, to devote to his office.

"Marriage is a definite asset," concluded McKay after carefully considering the encouragement and interest his companion will give him.

When the question of making KBYU more effective came before McKay, he answered, "I will represent to the proper authorities the students' desire to make KBYU a truly effective radio voice of the students."

"It is my greatest desire to help each student find his place at this University," said Crockett, candidate for ASBYU president.

Coordination Urged

Through coordinating off campus housing, giving more students an active part in student government, and encouraging student participation, Crockett feels that students can obtain the feeling of belonging, which would help delete the drop problem. He said, "I am interested in seeing students fulfill the purpose for which they came to BYU."

Crockett suggests that some work could be done in the area of traditions. A committee could be chosen to study and evaluate existing traditions; and upon evaluation, unique traditions such as friendliness, Spirit of the Y, and honor should be brought to the attention of the students.

"Good traditions, if made aware, could live for the studentbody," said Crockett.

Freshman President Offers Election 'Bet'

Sloan Hales, freshman class president, has publicly announced a challenge to other class presidents, Larry Jenkins, sophomore; Carl Mitchell, junior; and Mike Yoshino, senior. The challenge entails a get-out-to-vote campaign for primary and general studentbody voting.

Dear Fellow Class Presidents,

With elections now upon us, I can see an excellent opportunity for one of the four classes to vindicate itself by having the largest percentage of students "roll to the polls." I have complete faith and confidence for a victory for the class of 1960. Subsequently, may I make a public challenge to class presidents to engage in a "superiority of classes" contest with the stipulation that the losing class presidents undergo an agnominious consequence from the winner.

Sincerely yours,
Sloan Hales
Freshman Class President

I will be anxiously awaiting the voting percentage returns.

The ignominious consequence is a pie in the face of the losing class presidents, according to Norma Bergen, member of the elections committee.

Icy Showers, No Lights Features Of Dwelling

by Owen Jamison
Daily Universe Writer

Abe Lincoln has nothing over a few of the off-campus dwellers at Brigham Young University.

Recently it was divulged that a group of men, their names being withheld to protect the guilty, were living without the slightest knowledge that a high form of civilization was flourishing around them.

When asked why their house was always without light, the answer was given, "No electricity, why else?" "Why is that?" they were again asked. "Because of social pressure from the Provo City Power Company."

Upon further investigation of this situation it was also devulged that the house was also without gas, which is rather uncomfortable considering the beautiful "spring" weather which has plagued Provo and the surrounding country the past week.

Never let it be said that the occupants of this establishment were at one moment disheartened nor lost any of the fighting spirit so prominent among BYU "males."

Take Icy Showers

They would arise in the early hours calmly take an ice-cold shower and then using the same ice-cold water would have a good morning shave, although those who used an electric shaver would hurry off to the first "working" electrical outlet.

Studying? Why of course they used candles. Which they commented, "were very effective when entertaining guests."

Entertain in Dark

Recently, before the knowledge that the lights were off, a couple of the men decided to do a bit of entertaining—for which they politely unscrewed all the light bulbs around the house.

The ironic twist to this episode was that the electricity had actually been turned off this afternoon.

When, after the first interview, the men proudly announced that the gas was on and the lights were again shining through their windows

"Why is this" they were asked.

"Money, of course!" they answered

TV Quiz Contestant Collects $96,000 On Repeat Show

NEW YORK. (INS)—Robert Strom, the science-minded lad making his fortune on CBS-TV's "The $64,000 Question," repeated his triumphs on that subject again Tuesday to build his winnings up to $96,000.

Under the program's new format which extends the possible limit of a contestant's earnings to $256,000, he will be back before MC Hal March April 2 to try for the $128,000 "plateau."

If he wins, the $128,000 will be secure against loss, but additional winnings, if he decided to go on, could be lost through a wrong answer.

Last night the 10-year-old Bronx schoolboy took on six parts of a tough question on fluorescent lighting with no visible strain and delighted March and the audience as he ticked off the answers one after another.

The climax came when young Strom was confronted with the circuit components of a fluorescent lamp, placed in his isolation booth and told to connect them

The customary light of the booth was turned off and as millions of viewers stood by "sweating it out" for him he followed March's last directive—and plugged in the cord The fluorescent tube flashed on, proving that Robert hadn't missed a wire

Prejudice Lacking In Theater

by Cornelia Otis Skinner
(Distributed by INS)

I have yet to encounter an instance of prejudice and intolerance in the theatre—I hope I never will. This is very inspiring, but perhaps a little odd.

After all, actors, producers, directors and all the technicians who must work together in the theatre are human beings, subject to the same emotions, the same pressures as the human beings who make up their audience.

Why is it, then, that theatrical people seem to be relatively free of the prejudice and intolerance that still unfortunately exists in the world?

The answer, it seems to me, is that people in the theater have learned to work together and to have mutual respect for each other's talents.

Almost as part of their craft they learn that a person's background, his race or religion, have nothing to do with his abilities or his dignity as a human being. They learn, too, that every production is a creative collaboration of people working toward a single goal. Anything that does not contribute to this goal must be cast aside.

As destructive forces prejudice and intolerance have no place in any creative collaboration of men.

It has been said that the theater holds a mirror up to nature. In this one respect, at least, the theater is one step ahead of nature, pointing the way for us to banish these destructive forces of ignorance and misunderstanding from the human scene.

niverse Stops Social Briefs

Social briefs will be discontinued in the Daily Universe ning quarter in order to give ts better publicity on bigger nts.

Instead of running a regular st of times and places of meets, we will write up special ocsions such as openhouses, fashn shows, dances, culture nights, quets, etc.

Publicity chairmen should ng information on these ocsions to the Universe office three days before the date they want the article published.

If stories are important enough, pictures will be taken, but enough information to merit a 100-word article will be necessary.

Social briefs have taken up so much paper space that other important school events have had to be eliminated.

A very small proportion of the studentbody belong to a club, and surveys also indicated that many of the members never read social briefs.

Most clubs hold their meetings the same time and place every week, and president could announce in prior meetings if there would be any changes for the following week.

A bulletin board in the Student Service Center is also available for unit and club use.

Frosh Up Grid Hopes As Practice Opens

By JERRY CUNNINGHAM
Daily Universe Sports Editor

Upwards of 80 aspiring football hopefuls churned the turf in spring drills Tuesday as Head Coach Harold Kopp and his staff ran the eager gridders through their first stiff workout

"Beef 'aplenty" greeted the smiling coach who asserts that the large contingent of returning lettermen bolstered by a great freshman team would "give the Cougars an outside shot at the first division," when league play begins next fall.

The amiable Kopp won't pick the Cougars to win the Skyline crown next year, but was quick to assert, "They're coming! And in a couple of years they'll arrive."

The BYU coaching staff has been busy planning for another great freshman team for next year to go along with last season's Kittens which Max Tolbert guided to an undefeated season.

Heading the list of freshmen linemen vying for varsity berths are ends Gary Merrill, 6-4, 220 pounds; and Dick Woolstenhulme, 6-2, 190 pounds. Woolstenhulme has been watching from the sidelines as he has not completely recovered from a successful leg operation.

Leading freshmen tackles are 220-pound Lonnie Dennis, 210-pound Rex Reeves, 210-220-pound John Kapele.

Don Cunliffe, Jay Goldman and George Kinder are leading freshmen guard candidates. Each tips the scales at 200 or better. Ed Flint, 225, and Mel Brown, 195, are strong freshmen candidates for the center position.

The frosh aspirants are equally strong in the backfield. Howard Ringwood, Wayne Chamberlain, Keith Hubbs, Joe McGinn, Curtis Brown and Ron Startin are sure to figure prominently in Kopp's future running nad passing plans.

The speedy Chamberlain is currently on the track team and won't participate in the spring football program.

Hubbs, former All-American high school player, might see action at the tailback slot in a single wing offense since he is a fine runner, passer and punter.
